The Beatles are an English Rock group from Liverpool that formed in the 1960's. The Beatles were one of the most successful and critically acclaimed groups in the history of music. There is no single reason why The Beatles became so popular, but throughout their reign from early 1960's to the mid 1970's they took over the music industry and their success made them the influential band they are in the music industry today.

Four lads of varying in age named, John Lennon, who played rhythm guitar and performed vocals; Paul McCartney, who played Bass and vocals; Ringo Starr played drums and vocals and finally, George Harrison, who was the lead guitarist and vocals made up the Beatles. Each person in the Beatles had their own individual characters, which is what made the group so special. The Beatles not only influenced the music industry, but they also influenced the social and cultural revolution in the 1960's.

The Beatles had such a different style from any other band at the time, because they worked in many different genres of music. The group started off rooted in the Skiffle and 1950's rock and roll, and later expanding into pop ballads, psychedelic rock and having some classical influences in their songs. The popularity of The Beatles grew as their music developed and became more sophisticated.

After help from two influential characters, Brian Epstein, and George Martin the group broke into the mainstream in the United Kingdom in 1962 with their first single "Love Me Do". This song gave the group the start they needed and from that record they started to tour widely until 1966. The Beatles played a number of influential gigs on tour, and this is what made them so popular with the changing society of the 60's.

The success of The Beatles tours drove them to want to branch out into different countries. Countries like the US for example, although The Beatles didn't want to branch there until they hit number one in the UK. Once they did, they began their conquest of America on Feb. 7, 1964, and two days later they made their first appearance on American television. The Beatles fame followed them from the UK to the US, and approximately 74 million Americans viewed The Beatles first television appearance. The Beatles first concert in America exploded at the Washington Coliseum. To the delight of The Beatles, they had become more and more popular in America over the tour. The Beatles had become that popular over their tour they were to become the first entertainment act to stage a concert at a Stadium. The Beatles played at a stadium in New York City called Shea Stadium to an audience of 55, 600.

Even though the group broke up in the 70's, The Beatles are one of the most influential Rock and Roll bands. Not only did they influence many artists such as Jimmy Hendrix, David Bowie and Oasis who later become huge musical talents, but they had a huge impact on British Rock and Roll and American Rock and roll. Also, they influenced many other British musicians to branch out into the states, and their success over there was a big part of the migration. Furthermore, they influenced the way that the younger generation would dress, act, and live their lives. The Beatles style changed with the times and so did the supporters and loyal followers.

10 FACTS YOU DIDN'T KNOW ABOUT THE BEATLES

The Beatles Used to Live in A Cinema

The Beatles didn't always live in the lap of luxury; at the beginning they lived in Hamburg from 1960-1962, but when they first arrived, they lived in a cinema. Lennon commented on his experience there: 'We would go to bed late and be woken up the next day by the sound of the cinema show. We'd try to get into the ladies first, which was the cleanest of the cinema's lavatories, but fat old German women would push past us.'

Ringo Wasn't the Drummer for Their First Hit

Ringo Starr was the drummer for all The Beatles songs, correct? Wrong – he didn't play the drums on their first hit Love Me Do. In fact, session player Andy White stepped in whilst Starr was told to tap a tambourine. Their producer George Martin (may he rest in peace) thought that Starr was rushing into the choruses so had White stand in.

The Beatles Had Other Dreams

Whilst The Beatles revelled in their success as musicians, they also had various other aspirations. In early 1963 in an issue of the NME, the boys were asked to list their ambitions. Lennon's dream had always been 'to write a musical'; he wanted to write about Jesus coming back as an ordinary person. McCartney fantasised about having his 'picture in the Dandy' and Harrison always wanted 'to design a guitar.' Best of all, Starr's ambition was simply 'to be happy.'

Is Paul Here?

Beatlemania was massive. Fans were throwing themselves at the boys and the hype was indescribable. However, in the very early days of this craze, screaming fans would turn up at Harrison's house in Liverpool, and he would greet them in person. Yet, despite his equal fame the fans left when they were told 'No, Paul McCartney doesn't live here.'

Ready To Rock & Roll

The song Yesterday apparently came to McCartney in a dream completely formed and ready to record. The Beatle was so surprised by how easily it had come to him that he had to ask friends 'Is this by me or did someone else write it?' The song's catchy title however was originally called something else entirely – Scrambled Eggs. Perhaps it's a good thing that they changed the title...

A Tin Bath Was Used to Make Music

Yellow Submarine is one of the most iconic songs from The Beatles and was helped along by George Martin's engineers. To make the sounds of the recording seem genuine and to 'add some colour' to the mix the engineers were instructed to find props for the song. A whole range of props were used including chains, whistles, hooters, hand bells, and even a tin bath.

Hey Jules

Whether you're a Beatles fan or not, we all know the song Hey Jude. Nah nah nah... What a hit. But did you know that it wasn't originally written about someone called Jude? It was in fact initially called Hey Jules and aimed at Lennon's five-year-old son Julian. 'Hey Jules, don't make it bad...'

She Literally Came in Through the Bathroom Window

Songwriters must get their inspiration from somewhere, often it's from personal experiences, much like McCartney did for the song She Came in Through the Bathroom Window. Intrigued? Well, this song, from the medley section of Abbey Road, was inspired by something that happened to the famed Beatle. A fan used a ladder to climb up into Paul's bathroom window via his back garden and proceeded to steal a picture of his father, some clothes, and some slides of photos taken by Linda Eastman (later Linda McCartney.) Creepy, right? Well at least she got a Beatles song about her out of it...

Can you spot the differences between these pictures? I can spot 4!
